You can't toughen a horse to the spring work in a day. Start in easy. Think how it is with your own shoulders.

Regularity in feeding is of more consc quence than quantity. Many ponitry disorders are caused by alternate gorging

Burn all the old brush heaps now and get rid of a thousand and one pests that have had their light there waiting for warm weather to bring them into activity

As a rule, eggs from two-year-old hens give better satisfaction at this time of the year than when from younger stock, and the chicks are more vigorous.

By experiment It has been computed that 100 grains of lime are needed to make one strong cgg shell. Two hundred pounds of wheat are required to furnish sufficient lime for a dozen egg shells. 1 is easy to see why oyster shells and other slmilar ingredients should form a part of Rye is the poorest of poultry grains. Corn and buckwheat should be fed sparlngly as they are very fattening. Wheat leads as a well-balanced food, and barley is a close second. Feeding too much buckwheat has a tendency to produce a white skin and light-colored yolks in eggs.

Fowls require salt in their ration in order to thrive best, the same as do all other gested the old friend. mals. The minerals elements in the salt are desired by the fowls, and their systems crave them. But only a little salt is needed-not more than a handful a week to the average-sized farm flock.

The earliest returns from the garden stuff will be secured from that planted on ground that was fall plowed. Owing to its physical condition such soil is warmer and hence makes possible a more rapid growth of plant life.

Feed plenty of stalle manure and, my word for it. in nlne cases out of ten, the old orchard will pay for itself ten times over. Take care of it, be good to it; it

Pure, clean water is an absolute essen ial that too often is neglected. Eggs ontain such a very large per cent of water that we ought to realize how impossible It is for hens to produce them Prompt Delivery, without this most necessary element. Change the drinking water frequently and keep all vessels used for the purpose perfeetly clean at all times.

> Bees begin breeding leavily before they have an opportunity to gather hone; rom flowers, and to make strong profitable colonies they must have a good sup ply of reserve stores in the hive. If they are not thus supplied, they will certainly fall short of making colonies that will produce the hest results during the honey

Here is a prolife source of trouble. full details "-Life. Many men feed liberally as far as quantity is concerned, and yet really keep their animals on short rations because the material which they supply contains only a small proportion of nutriment. The animals can not eat and digest enough of this kind of feed to get a sufficient quantity of the elements needed to enable them to do the best that they are capable of doing in the way of growth of producion.—Agricultural Epitomist.

In buying a sow for breeding purposes it is well for the purchaser to take account of the number of pigs there were in the litter in which she was born. There may have been three, maybe eight, and possibly eleven or twelve. The young sow is quite likely to follow the breeding habit of her dam in respect of the number of the litter, and if a good producer is wanted a sow from a large litter should e selected.

Not a Suffragist Yet. During a presidential eampalgn the question of woman suffrage was much discussed among women pro and con. and at an afternoon tea the conversation turned that way among the women guests. "Are you a woman suffragist?" asked the one who was most interested.

"Indeed. I am not," replied the other most emphatically. "Oh, that's too bad! But, just sup posing you were, whom would you support in the present campaign?" "The same man I've aiways supported, of course," was the apt reply-"my E's promised to go round the town husband."-Ladies' Home Journal.

CHANGED THE RECORD.

The Court Dlundered and the Old Man "There used to be an old fellow of sixty," said a Benver judge, "who got irrested about twice a week for conviviality. The cenvivial Christmas spirit in the crisp Denver air was, of course, too much for him, and the day after his return he was haled before the usual magistrate on the usual charge. "The magistrate in the green festooned controom felt kindly and forgiving.

"'Well, George,' he said to the prisoner, 'you are here again at last, eh?' "'Yes, your honor,' said old George humbly. "You've been away some time.

haven't you?'

"'Yes, your honor; nigh on to three months. "'Aml how many times, George, did you get drunk during that period?" "'I don't like to say, your honor,' old George faltered, 'hefore all these here "'Well,' said the magistrate, 'take paper and pencil and write it down."

"So George wrote, and the paper was passed up to the magistrate, who look ed at It and said: "'Ah, well, it's the Christmas season, and since you were away three months, George, and got drunk only sixteen times I'll let you off.' "'Thank you, judge,' said old George as he left the dock. 'You looked at the paper upside down, though."

Hard Work. The Idle man does not know what It is to rest. Hard work tends not only to give us rest for the body, but, what is even more important, peace to the mind.-Sir John Lubbock.

Mercy and Fresh Eggs. At a small post in Egypt Sir Gilbert Parker, the novellst, and an English officer lived practically on eggs and tinned meat, and, as there was nothing else to be had, the eggs were a very important item of the dietary. Day after day the eggs, like those of the oft quoted curate, were "very good in parts," but one morning they were frankly bad. The officer, who had the power of life and death in should be fresh in future, so the egg merchant was brought before him. and the wretched man, standing be tween two sentries, obeyed tremblingly. Slowly and solemnly an evil smelling egg was poured in. Agaln the command was given, and again a potentlal rooster was gulped down. A third followed the other two, which must have been the worst of the lot, for the victim, with tears of agony streaming down his face, fell on his knees and, half choking, gasped for mercy. He got the mercy, and the officers got fresh eggs in future. Cause of the List. When Theodore Roosevelt was president he told this story on William II. Taft, who was then secretary of war: "When I started for Pauama on the same warship that Taft had traveled on I noticed a slight list to starboard. I called the eaptain in and asked him how it happened that we were not runnlng on an even keel. He was some what embarrassed, but I told him to 'out with it,' and he came back with this: 'Well, Mr. President, the secretary of war sailed with us not long ago, and he slept on the port side. And-and-well, sir, we haven't had a chance yet to shift ballast."

The Irishman's Request. In the days when flogging was in rogue as a punishment in the British navy a Scotchman and an Irishman on the arrival of their ship in harbor obtained leave to go ashore for a couple days, and they overstayed the period of leave granted them. When they did put in au appearance they were ordered fifty lashes each. On the day of the punishment a parade was ordered to witness the infliction of the flogging. When all was ready the Scotchman asked as a favor to be allowed a piece of canvas on his back while he received his flogging. The captalu grant ed his request and, turning to the Irishman, asked him if he required anything ged, to which he replied, "If ye plaze, yer honor, I'd lolke to have the Scotchman on my back, if ye wouldn't mind."

When You Can't Sleep. There is an odd theory, which many people believe and which is ecrtainly harmless, that sleeplessness may often be cured in the following odd way: that no part of bed or covers will tonch the wall. Then place under each caster of the bed a piece of rubber or a rubber overshoe or set the caster in thick glass dish. Then go to bed, mak-Ing sure the covers do not touch the wall. Thus the bed and yourself will be cut off from all electric contact with floor or wall. Such absence of electric contact, it is claimed, will make you sleep better. It is said to have enred stubborn cases of Insomula.

How to Open a New Book. The best way to open a new book without risk of injuring it is to place it on its back upon a smooth or covered table, let down the fore and then the hind board, hold the leaves in one hand and open a few of the fore and afterward the end leaves until you reach the eenter of the volume. Do this several times and you will not break the back of the book.

"If this drive goes out it surely busts me," replied Orde, "and I'm not taking even long chances." A cloudburst in the China creek district followed by continued heavy rains was responsible for the increased water. The evening papers mentloned this only incidentally. Their columns were filled with an account of the big log jam that had formed above the Iron railroad bridge. The planing mili's booms had given wer under pressure, and the contents had piled downstream against the buttresses. Orde slept that night at the booms. The water by morning had crept so far up the plles that there began to be danger that it would overflow their tops. In that case, of course, the logs

"I'm partly responsible," said Newmark "You!" cried Orde. "Yes. You see that Smith & Mabstrain a point for-and it's only twenly-four hours or so-aml it certainly didn't look as if It were going to blow. Poor Floyd feels had enough." Orde hegan to appreciate his circumctances. The loss on the eargo of "uppers" represented $20,000 in money. As for the North Star and her consorts, save for the insurance, they were simply eliminated. The loss of gangian or so on their, however, did not mean a diminition of the compamy's present each resources to that amount and so did not immediately affect Orde's calculations as to the payment of the notes which were now soon to come due. Orde disappeared for a week, his organizing addities elalined for the distribution of the road crews. When he relucted to the office Newmark showed him contracts for the construcdon of three new vessels. "I get them for $55,000," said he, "with $20,000 of it on long time." "William consulting me!" cried apportunity. "Citherwise," he finished. "we shouldn't have been able to get the job done for another year. If that ldg Cronin contract goes through-well, you know what that would mean in the shippards-nobody would get even a look in And McLeed is willing to give us a price to been his men busy. so, you see, I had to close at ouce." "It's a good chance, all right," admitted firde, "but it never occurred to me we'd build any more vessels until we'd recovered a little."

"Recovered," Newmark repeated coldly. "I don't see what 'recovered' has to do with It. If the mill burned dawn we'd rebuild, wouldn't we? And as we're usiking $45,000 a year out of our freighting it seems to me too good a lusiness to let slip luto other hands." "I suprase so," agreed Orde. "Therefore I had to act without yon," Newmark finished.

Now, as the time approached. he realized that if he could not pay the notes the tirm would certainly be unable to do so. What with the second mortgage due two years later and to be met by Newmark, with the outstanding onligations, with the new en-

A sale of the 40,000,000 feet remaining of the tirm's up river holdings, together with the tolls to be collected for drlvlng the river that spring, would bring Orde through by "the skin of his teelli." To ent 40,000,000 feet, even in these latter days of improvements, would be a task to strain to the ntmost every resource of energy and organization.

Nevertheless Orde accomplished the task. He lived constantly in the woods. The Hough Red had charge of the hanking, where his aggressive, brutal personality kept the rollways free from congestion. When the drive started the cut was banked for miles nlong the stream, 40,000,000 feet of It. The strain over, Orde faced the task of driving the river. From Taylor, Orde had several com-drive in the history of the river, a The morning of June 26 dawned clear. Orde drove capidly to the distributing booms. After a glauce at the river be entered the tiny office and set about the examination of the tally sheets. The foreman, Tom North, en-"The river's rising," he said.

"You're crazy," unttered Orde. "There have been no rains reported." "It's rising," insisted North. An hour later Orde walked out over the looms. The water certainly had risen. He called a boy. "Here, Jimmy," said be, "mark one of these piles and keep track of how fast the water rises" The river slowly rose. "I don't like June floods," Orde told Tom Nortic, "A fellow can understand an ordinary spring freshet and knows about how far it will go, but these summer thoods are so confounded mysterlons I can't tigure ont what's struck the old stream unless they're having almighty heavy rains up near headwaters.'

By 3 o'clock in the afternoon Jimmy Powers reported a rise since morning of six inches. "Tom," said Orde to the old riverman, "I'm going to send Marsh down for the pile drivers and some cable." "What in blazes do you expect to do with that?" he inquired. "We may need them," Orde stated, with conviction. "if those logs ever break through they'll go on out to Lake Michigan and wenidn't be worth the salvage.'

"That's a mighty long chance," North

"If this drive goes out it surely busts me," replied Orde, "and I'm not taking even long chances." A cloudburst in the China creek district followed by continued heavy rains was responsible for the increased water. The evening papers mentioned tinks only incidentally. Their columns were filled with an account of the big log jam that had formed above the iron rathroad bridge. The planing mili's booms had given wer under pressure, and the contents had piled downstream against the buttresses. Orde slep: that night at the booms. The water by morning had crept so far up the piles that there began to be danger that it would overflow their tops. In that case, of course, the logs in the booms would also run out. Orde set a crew of men to raising the height of the piliug by tying logs firmiy to the bolted tlmbers atop. This would take eare of an extra two feet of water, a two feet beyond all previous records. Another crew stretched the tifteen luch manila cables across the field of logs in order to segregate them into several units of mass. About two hours later the pile driver moved up. The swing was opened, drivers and the two tugs. After an and the men began to drive clumps of interval they returned towing small piles in such a position as to strength- rafts of the long timbers. The half dozen members of the crew were scattered by the winds of a panic. Two or three thing themselves on their faces; one leaped into the river. Imminent destruction seemed upon them. Tom North, at the winch that operated the arm of the swing, however, retained his presence of mind. At the first sag outward of the boom piles he set in operation the machinery that closed the gate. Clausy and slow as was his mechanism, he nevertheless succeeded in getting the long arm started. The logs, rushing in back of it, Imrried it shut. Damediately they jammed again and heaped up in a formidable langle labind the barrier, Tom North, his little black pipe hetween his teeth, stood caim, the lever of his winch in his hand. the upheaval. "Tom," sald Orde briskly to North, 'you know the pile driving business. Pick out your crew and take charge." Orde took charge of the situation in its entirety, as a general might. He set North immediately to driving clumps each of sixteen piles, bound to solidity by chalus, and so arranged In angles and slants as to direct the enormous pressure toward either bank, thus splitting the enemy's power. The small driver owned by the Boom company drove similar climps here, there and everywhere that need arose or weakness developed. "Well, who's in charge?" "Mr. Lambert." Orde passed through the grill into he inner room. "Hello, Lambert," he addressed the individual seated at Heinzman's desk. "So you're the boss, ch?" "Yes, I'm the boss," said he non committally.

"Helnzman holds some notes due against our people in ten days," said Orde. "I came in to see about their renewal." Lambert struck a bell, and to the bookkeeper who answered he said "John, bring me those Newmark & Orde papers."

The clerk returned and handed to Lambert a long manila envelope. Lamhert spread its contents on his knee. "Note for $75,000 with interest at 10 per cent. Interest paid to Jan. 10. Mortgage deed on certain lands described herein." "I want to renew the note for another year," Orde explained.

"He said not to renew even if you offered higher Interest." "What does he intend about this mortgage?" "To foreclose." "Where's your telephone?" Orde asked. He tried in valu to get Heinzman at his house. The bell had been removed. Orde left the office at a loss how to proceed next. "There's the year of redemption on that mortgage," he reminded himself. "We may be able to do something in that time. I don't know just what," he added whimsically, with a laugh at himself. He became grave. "Poor Joe," he sahl. "This is prefty tough on him. I'll have to make it up to him somehow. I can let him in on that California deal when the titles are straightened ont.

THDE did not return to the office. He felt unwilling to face Newmark until he had a little more thoroughly digested the situation. He spent the rest of the afterneon about the place playing with Bobby. Three or four times he called up Carroll by telephone. After dinner they sat on the porch until Bobby's hedtime. Orde put his small son to bed and sat talking with the youngster as long as his conscience would permit. Then he retired to the library. Suddenly Orde leaned forward, his senses at the kecnest attention. After n moment he arose and quietly walked toward the open window. Just as he reached the casement and looked out a man looked in. The two stared at each other not two feet apart. "Good Lord, Heinzman!" cried Orde.

"Dake me somewheres." he whispered hoarsely. "I haf broke quarantine, and dey vill be after me." "What do you mean by coming here and exposing my house to infection?" Heinzman began to blubber and cried aloud in greatest agony: "I haf somedings to say to you." He

"Telephone Lambert in the morning to give it to me. No-here. Write an order in this notebook. Heinzman wrote the required order. "I go," said he, suddenly weary.

Orde accompanied him down the street and succeeded in slipping him through the improvised quarantine. Morning found Orde still scated in the library chair. His head was sunk forward on his chest; his hands were extended, listless, palms up, along the arms of the chair; his eyes were vacant and troubled. When the full sun shone Into the library he aroused himself to change his clothes. Then, carrying those he had just disearded, he slipped out of the house and down the street. He pansed only long enough to telephone from the office telling Carroll be would be out of town all day. Then he set out at a long swinging gait over the hills, miles from the village and in the high beech woods. There he sat down, his back to a mouster tree. All day long he gazed steadily on the shifting shadows and splotches of smallght; on the patches of blue sky, the dazzling white clouds that sailed across them; on the waving, whispering frond that overarched him and the deep coof shadows beneath.

At evening Orde shook himself and Pneumatic Cleaner ile reached home a little before 6 o'clock. ile found Taylor awaiting him.

"I have things pretty well in shape," the lawyer said. "Then the trouble is over?" asked without removing furniture Orde. "I wouldn't say that," replied Taylor, or carpets. "but you can rest easy as to the title to your lands. The investigation had Hand or Electric Machines no real basis to it. There may have been some small individual cases of false entry, but nothing ou which to ground a real attack." "When can I borrow on it?" "Not for a year or two, I should say, There's an awful lot of red tape to unwind." "Oh." said Orde in some disappointment. Taylor hesitated. Taylor hesitated.

"I have something more to tell you- 25 something that will be painful," said

Orde looked up quickly. "Well, what is It?" "The general cussedness of all this investigation business had me puzzled until at last I made up my mind to do little investigating on my own account. There was one man behind all this. He was"-"Joe Newmark," said Orde quietly. "How did you know that?" "I just guessed."

"Well, it was Newmark. He tled up the land in this trumped up investigation so you could not borrow on it." "How did he lind out I owned any land?" asked Orde. "That I couldn't tell you. Must have been a leak somewhere." Orde did not wish to return to the office until he had worked his problem out, so to lend his absence the color of naturalness he drove back next moru-

ing to the booms. In the evening he went direct to Newmark's. "Mr. Newmark is out, sir," said Mallock and started to close the door. But Orde thrust his foot and knee in Open for Business the opening. "I'll come in and wait," said quietly. "Yes, sir; this way, sir," said Mallock, trying to Indicate the dlning room. Orde caught the aroma of tobacco. He turned the knob of the door and entered the library. There he found Newmark in evening dress, seated in a low easy chair beneath a lamp, smoking and reading a magazine. At Orde's appearance in the doorway he looked up calmly, his paper knife poised, keeping the place. Orde entered the room and mechan ically sat down. "Newmark," Orde began abruptly, " know all about this arrangement you made with Heinzman."

"I borrowed some money from Heinz man for the lirm." "Yes, and you supplied that money Newmark's eyes narrowed. "Well, what of it?"

"If you had the money to lend why didn't you lend it direct?" "Because it woks better to mortgage to an outside holder." "That was not the reason," went on Orde. "You agreed with Helnzman to divide when you succeeded in foreclosing me out of the timberlands given as security. Furthermore, you instructed Floyd to go out on the eve of that blow in spite of his warnings, and you contracted with McLeod for the new vessels, and you've tled us up right and left for the sole purpose of pinching us down where we couldn't meet those notes. That's the only reason you borrowed the seventy-tive thousand on your own account-so we couldn't borrow it to save ourselves." "It strikes me you are interesting. but inconclusive," said Newmark as Orde paused again. "That sort of thing is somewhat of a facer," went on Orde without the slightest attention to the interjection. "It took me some days to work it ou! in all its details, but I believe I under stand it all now. I don't quite understand how you discovered about my California timber. That 'investigation' was a very pretty move." "How the devil did you get on to that?" cried Newmark, startled.

dogs have a keen sense of efiquette. A well known traveler makes this unexpected remark about a tribe of naked Idack men living on one of the south sea islands: "In their everyday intercourse there is much that is stiff, formal and precise." Almost the same remark might be made about dogs. Unless they are on very latimate terms they take great pains never to brush [agalust or even to touch one another. For one dog to step over another is a dangerous breach of etiquette unless they are special friends. It is no uncommon thing for two dogs to belong to the same person and live In the same house and yet never take the slightest notice of each other. We have a spaniel so dignified that he will never permit another member at the dog family to pillow his head upon hlm; but, with the egotlsm of a true aristocrat, he does not hesitate to make use of the other dogs for that purpose.-Henry ? KNOCKED FOR RAIN.

and the Shower Came.

Frances Gostling, author of "The Britons at Home," has this curious tale of the dolmen of Rocenaud, with its curious cup shaped impressions like the constellation Pleiades; An old woman, a bystander, was asked what the marks were for, "Folks say," said she, "that they were made by the elbows and knees of St. Rock. He fell down on this stone when he landed from Ireland." And then the old woman added: "We use the holes now when we want the wind to change. We knock in them." The story conthrues: "'Do ask her to knock." I cried anction at the Sheriff's effice, Court House, De eagerly. gn ashore. This permit is especially hard o get as the echoes of the revolution are still reverbrating through the beautifu hills which enclose the Bosphorus. And, so, as I know that the wonderland, which thrills one even at this distance, will crowd pen and brain slike when I once set for ishore, I write the overture now. The morning after we sailed from the Piraens of Athens, found us threading our plackl course through the lovely islands of the Conian Archipelago I pon fortresses, perched upon steep hillsides rugging the sea. Numerous small sailing craft were everywhere. All of them had the funny looking triangle sail which is a snrvival of the same form carried by the boats of the Levant for over a score of centuries. We gazed with rapt intentness t the Island of Alydos, and wondered where Byron got his inspiration for his ton Star.

eautiful poem We steamed by Navarius where the naval battle, resulting in the destruction of the Turkish fleet, determined the antonomy of Greece. We were throne was placed, and whence the Persian King witnessed the annihillation of l his fleet at Salamis, and, as our collegian friends remarked, noted where the wave of Eastern dispotism reached its furthest

Away to the North rose the dome of Mount Olympus, oceasional fleecy clouds drifting by its towering crest. One can well understand why the Grecian mythologist placed the throne of his Japiter the older lady - Snn Francisco Argonant. Tonans upon this lofty height, and it requires but a slight stretch of fancy to picture the pagan gods and goddesses as Morgan controls one-ninth of the wealth seated on the soft masses of vapor which in the United States, it is equaly true that glided across the azure skies. And if I every citizen is trying to control as much could not see Juno, the westering sun gave us a glimpse of the colors of her favorite peacoel. In the brilliant sun days, fragments of rainbows, which the sun painted on the mountain slope. I really do not wish to gush but a more perfect day, a calmer sea, a fairer sky could not be imaged. We sat on deck all day having luneheon brought up from the saloon, and it was not till Venns, in the glitter of the plant, graced the evening sky, that we reinctantly went below. An early eall brought us betimes to see the shores of Asia ahead of us. Shop the narrow strait of the Dardanelles opened before us, and pushing forward, our boat was steaming with a continent on either hand. The old stone castles which once proved such a cense stand picturesquely psolete. "crom we to the other a huge chain could be drawn. Just below this we were pointed out the spot where Leander swam the Hellespont to eatl on Hero. Others have since performed the feat, but none with so romantic a quest.

In two hours we emerged into the sea of Marmon, and then for hours the land faded into a dull blur, whilst the yacht plowed through the sparkling waters, and all the waters seem almost as blue as the deep sea tint of the Gulf stream. We were pointed out the Prince's Islands, where formerly the surplus brothers, and amhitious sons of the Sultan, were kept in safe storage until wanted, sometimes for the throne, but, alas, much more frequently for the silent bow string. Just before sunset, the densely foliaged

Seraglio Point was near at hand. Long before this we had been gazing with admiration on the fretted line of minarets. and domes which break the horizon over Strombonl, as old Constantinople is alled. We could plainly make out the mighty walls, erected by the Constantine from whom the city derives its name. I do not know upon how many hills the tity stands, but its vast extent spreads from hill-top to hill-top, and the high enclosing wall, broken by seores of towers, dips and rises as it encircles the white honses within. Seraglio Point was once the residence of the Sultan's, and its gardens are still enchanting with flowers, rare, brilliantly plumed birds and gentle feer. But the romanee departed with the nouris which once walked in its carefully secluded shades. I learn that the late Sultan had no less than nine palaces, all of which were kept in readiness for instant ocenpation. We auchored just at dusk off one of these palaees, the Dolma Batchi, (I don't guarantee the spelling) and stared our eyes out at the latticed windows, behind which we pictured beautiful Circassin odalisques. Too had, for before we slept we found out that all the haven had beeu removed. The waters about us soon were alive with gay caiones, as the wonderfully graceful boats are called. They seem as fragile as college shells and the peculiar sliding stroke of the oars differs from the senller's stroke elsewhere. These caiques are carpeted, gilded and ornamented as a Queen's harge. Just before dark a very large caique pulled by twenty-four oarsmen sped by like the flight of a swallow and as noiselessly. The pilot told us that this was one of the Sulton's own and one could almost believe that beneath the gilded eanopy at the stern. sat the Commander of the Faithful. The European town of Paralies abreast of us, and here the houses crowd the steep slopes, the doorway of one levelling

"OU seem to have this game all ligured out," sald Orde with contempt.

"Well," said the other, "let's settle this thing. The fact remains that the firm owes a note to Helnzman which It cannot pay. You owe a note to the lirm which you cannot pay. All this may be slightly irregular, but for private reasons you do not care to make public the irregularity. Am I right so

"You might hear the other side," in terrupted Orde, "In the first place," sald he, producing a bundle of papers. "I have the note and the mortgages in my possession." "Whence Helnzman will shortly rescue them as soon as I get to see him," countered Newmark. "If you force Heinzman he'll land you," Orde pointed out. "There Is Canada for me. He travels with heavier baggage." "You'd lose everythlug." "Not quite," smiled Newmark. "And, us usual, you are forgetting the personal equation. Heinzman Is-Heinzman. And I am I." "Then I suppose this affidavit from Helnzman as to the details of all this Is useless for the same reason?"

"Correct," sald he. "But you're ready to compromise be low the face of the note?" Newmark hesitated.

Newmark's thin flps parted.

"Yes," said he, "because I know you well enough to realize that there is a point where your loyalty to Heinzman would step aside in favor of your loyaity to your family." "And you think you know where that point is?"

"It's the hasts of my compromise. Orde Inughed "The worst of it is I believe you're right," said he at last. "You have the thing sized up, and there isn't a flaw

In your reasoning. I always said that you were the brains of this concern. If it were not for one thing I'd compromise sure, and that one thing was lieyond your power to foresee." He paused. Newmark's eyes half closed again in a quick darting effort of his brain to run back over all the elements of the game he was playing. "What Is It?" asked Newmark at

"Helnzman dled of smallpox at 4 o'clock this afternoon," said Orde. Newmark's face went slowly gray. For a full minute he sat absolutely motlouless. "Where are you going?" asked Orde quletly. "I'm going to get myself a drink in my bedroom," he snapped. "Any objectlops? "No. After you get your drink ! want to talk to you."

Newmark snarled at him: ucedn't be afrald I'll run away. How'd get out of town?" Orde looked thoughtfully at Heluzman's allidavit, which, duly disinfected. had been handed him by Dr. McMullen as Important. Then he arose to his feet and glided softly across the room to take a position close to the door through which Newmark had departed. Flually the door swung briskly Inward. Like a panther Orde sprang forward. the Commissioners, John F. Merrell of The pluloued Newmark's arms to his side, where he held them immovable

He spllied out the car trldges and tossed the empty weapon to Newmark. "There's your plaything," said be "So you wanted that allidaylt, did vou? He paused.

"I don't need to tell you that I've got you," said he finally, "nor what I thluk of you. I can send you over the days; also I've got these notes and the mortgage.' "Quit It," growled Newmark. "Send Tennyson's Love For Birds. Alfred Tennyson was all his life great lover of the woods and fields. Trees, birds and flowers were his everyday companions, and he faithfully studied the habits of Dame Nature's English mirslings. The lark, the nightingale, the owl and the linnet were his favorite birds. He was also greatly interested in the sea birds, the peregrine falcons, the cormorants, seagulls, etc., and in the long legged sea birds, the visitors to marshes and pools. He thought the enriew, of which he has written in "Locksley Hall," a very uoble bird and loved its wild call over the marshes. There are many references to ldrds native to England in his poents, and all of them show a thorough acquaintance with the individual characteristics of the different species. At Farringford the poet's garden was the home of the wild birds of the hedgerows. The blackbird and robin and the smaller birds flocked there in great numbers, and it was considered far more important that they should feel welcome there than that the fruit should be permitted to ripen undisturh-

It is the meeting of those men and their neighbors on March 13, 1-10, many months before either this church or society was organized, that we are met to celebrate. I imagine I know why the meeting was called at that time. It was because the opportunity presented itself to secure at a reasonable price, a meetlug house about to be taken down in Boston. The matter admitted of no delay. Forty three persons responded to the call and voted, upon their own responsibility, to choose a "committee to purchase the meeting-house about to be taken down on Hollis street." That house was only 22 years old but the Hollis street society wanted a larger building or one more suited to their needs or their ambition.

It stood where the Hollis street theatre So It came to pass that a historic church. designed by Charles Bulfinch-who was also the architect of the Capitol at Washington and of the Statehouse on Beacon Hill-was taken apart, transported junction of Quincy Avenue with the N. Y. & N. H. Railroad.

Practicality in the Household

Means running it in a business-like way. Success in business is achieved by economy of time and energy.

In Large Households

The mistress cannot give the time nor the strength to keep running from the kitchen to the attic in order to give proper attention to every detail of domestic management.

An Extension Telephone

In most houses will serve the purpose and save worry and strength-but

An Intercommunicating Telephone System

In the large town or country house places the mistress in touch with every department of her household and invalves no fatiguing effort.

The cost is slight. Estimates and succeys cheerfully furnished free upon request to Local Manager.

Generally it consists of shiftless whites who rent "mule farms"-forty acres-or small truck patches from the large landowners. Most of the "crap" goes to the landlord for rent and advances, and after it is gathered there is nothing to keep the renters from following their nomadie instincts.

The one indispensable adjunct of a party is a mule "kyart" of some description, and this is something that nearly every renter possesses. It may be old and an onteast from commercial value, but with the gun and dog forms indisputable evidence of the renter's respectability.

It was near noon the next Tuesday before the Norton family were ready to make a start. The night before Tom had made his wife and Jeff go to bed early and had himself curied up on a blanket before the fire and pretended to fall asleep, but a few hours things that boys shouldn't be a-pursu-Although the cart was not large, It was roomy enough to hold their few belongings and still leave room for an easy chair for Mrs. Norton. Tom still owned a strong pair of mules, so It was not necessary for either him or Jeff to walk.

After crossing into Florida they followed the Suwance river for several days and then turned to the southeast and passed through the lake reglon and on to Orlando and Kissimmee. They went slowly and made frequent pauses. Occasionally Ton had visitors whom he regarded with suspicion. Several times he had broken camp in the middle of the night and hurricd away with all possible speed. It was late in December when they entered the wilderness that lies between Kissimmee and Charlotte Harbor. It was a region new to Tour, and as each day disclosed fresh beantles he grew more and more enthusinstic in Its praises.

One day they were surprised by the visit of a horseman, who said he came from "right smart back yonder." He proved talkative and in answer to Tom's inquiry said that very little of the land had been entered and that one could have his pick of homesteads. After he left Mrs. Norton looked auxlously at her husband. "Hit's be a mighty nice place to set-

There's said to be 'mazin' good land down Charlotte Harbor way." Then, seeing the hopeless look creep back to her eyes, he added, not unkindly: "Ye mustn't be frettin', Nance. I figger on makin' jest a little mo', an' then we'll settle down for sure an' certing. We can come back here any time If there's no better land to be foun'. I 'low on stoppln' to Bartow, an' then we'll push on straight for the Harbor." Another day was spent in hunting. and then they resumed their journey. Late one afternoon they reached the
